President's Message

Submitted By Sheila Wald

Fall is in the air, my quail population is huge and driving all my dogs absolutely crazy. Hunting season can't start soon enough for the dogs! Another summer is in the books, along with our summer specialty. Thank you all who entered and special thanks to those who helped. Kudos especially to the show committee, Show Chairman Dani McCafferty, Obedience Chairman, Dee Smiley for another successful event despite the soaring heat. It takes a lot of folks for it to run smoothly. We had a few bumps, but everyone came together and put on a great event. Even simple things make a difference as one Professional Handler attending from out of the area commented "out of all the rings I am showing in today, Vizslas are the only one providing water and spray bottles, Thank you!"

On a serious note. We have had more rescue activity this summer than in previous years. Truthfully I am not surprised with the increasing popularity of the Vizsla. One however was quite unusual and served as heartbreaking reminder to have a plan prepared for the welfare of your dogs. I hope you will take a moment to read the article Should the Un-thinkable Happen included in this Newsletter edition.

Should the Unthinkable Happen...?

Over the summer a number of events happened which brought home the fact, a plan for my pets is essential. I have always had an emergency plan for the house and car in case of fire, accident etc. I am fortunate my children who love my dogs live nearby, and our wishes have been well communicated if something should happen to my husband or me. However the need to put it in writing and add some legality to it was not something I had fully considered.

The first event was a dog coming into rescue. That in itself is not that unusual but the dog coming in was. Imagine our shock when his crate tag revealed this elderly gentleman was a Best in Specialty winning show champion. Thankfully he ended up in a VCA sanctioned rescue, but why? Now I am sure his owners never envisioned that happening. It was a perfect storm of the breeder and one owner dying in the last year and the remaining owner becoming too incapacitated to communicate to his family his wishes regarding the dog.

Heart heavy, I began researching the ways to prevent something similar happening to my dogs. My dogs are included in my will, but what about in the event of a disability similar to the situation with Mac the rescue? The best recommendation I found is a trust set up specifically for your pets. There are a number of types and options to consider. Speak with your attorney or there are DIY options available. Either way I suggest you consider setting up a plan and communicating it with your loved ones. Check out this additional source for more information. http://www.aarp.org/relationships/pets/info-04-2009/in_pets_we_trust.html

The second event, was multiple reports in recent weeks of a medical emergency occurring on the road with dogs in tow, including a respected Vizsla owner handler. In all the cases, the dog community sprang into action, but it is a good reminder that a solid plan for the road and for my family members is essential. I have such a plan but the following article has some new items I am going to incorporate. If you don't have a plan, it will give you a great place to start! <http://www.bestinshowdaily.com/as-the-wheels-turn-the-words-no-one-wants-to-hear-in-case-of-emergency/>

I am always happy to share my resources as well, please feel free to contact me for my E-info sheet I carry in all my vehicles and my crate labels, smwald@gpkennels.com. Because I live where there is high wildfire danger, I also have I.C.E labels next to the main entrances of the house and kennel, alerting emergency personnel of their presence and who to contact.

Make a plan, communicate it to multiple people, particularly other dog owners, maybe your breeder, another club member, your neighbor etc. I am on a few plans for other club members, a co-worker and family. IF the unthinkable should happen to you, please make sure it doesn't happen to your dogs.

Better Breeding BY LISA M. CURRY, ESQ.

Estate Planning for Breeders

Deciding what will become of your dogs should you be incapacitated or die is a difficult decision. The more dogs you have, the more troubling it is. A loved one may be willing to take one or a few dogs, but 10? Twenty? Breeders with a full kennel have a greater burden than the average pet owner when it comes to planning their dogs' future. There are two primary legal mechanisms to provide for your dogs: non-trust arrangements and trusts.

Non-Trust Arrangements

The simplest way to provide for your dogs is to designate—in writing—a caretaker to take custody of them if need arises, before or after your death. Name several backups in case your first choice is unable or unwilling to serve when the time comes. Provide a written “letter of instruction” with specific directions as to which dogs are to be placed with which caretaker, and the exact care each dog should receive. Identify the dogs as specifically as possible, and don’t forget to add the words “and any other dogs I own at the time I die or am incapacitated.”

If you cannot identify an appropriate caregiver, designate someone with good judgment to select one. Provide a copy of the letter of instruction to each person affected, and place a copy with your important papers. If you have a power of attorney, make sure that person has a copy of the letter and has the authority to make expenditures on behalf of your dogs while you are incapacitated and before a will is probated. You may want to incorporate your letter of instruction into your will. Although perhaps not fully enforceable, this may influence how your executor disposes of your dogs and your money.

A loved one may be willing to take one dog, but five?

The problem with merely designating a caretaker and leaving a letter of instruction is the lack of legal assurance that your wishes will be followed. Leaving your estate to your dogs directly is not an option: Courts of any state will reject such a provision. The alternative to this quandary is to create a trust.

Creating a Trust

A trust is an arrangement whereby you place assets in the care of a trustee, who has a fiduciary duty to use those assets according to your wishes on behalf of the beneficiary (or beneficiaries) whom you designate. You designate a caregiver for your dogs and, as described below, either the dogs or the caregiver may be your beneficiary. Include directions (similar to the letter of instruction) in the trust document describing exactly what care the caregiver should provide for your dogs on a daily basis, right down to their breeding and showing careers,

Better Breeding

housing, food, medical needs, veterinarians, and which toys they prefer. Designating different people as caregiver and trustee ensures there are checks and balances in place (although a caregiver may be a co-trustee as well). Even though you have a trust, you can leave the dogs as property to someone in your will. Naming the caregiver as at least one of the future owners may help avoid future ownership disputes.

Types of Trusts

Pet trusts. A pet trust is a specific arrangement, legally recognized in half the states, in which your dogs are the beneficiaries. As noted above, the trust document should specifically identify the beneficiary dogs, using DNA, microchip numbers, call name, AKC-registered name and number, photos, and so on.

Common law trusts. In other states, a pet trust is not legally enforceable. Residents can designate only human beneficiaries, not dogs. But even in one of these states, you can establish a “common law trust.” To make certain the common law trust is effective, (a) ensure the caregiver receives funds on a frequent basis (not all at once or only once a year), and (b) ensure funds are disbursed conditionally, i.e., in order to continue receiving funds, the caregiver must frequently check in with the trustee and demonstrate that proper care is being given to the dogs. This provision helps ensure that the “checks and balances” will work properly. A common law trust set up this way is generally legally enforceable.

Trust Considerations

Choosing a trustee. For both types of trust, you must designate a trustee—someone you know and can rely on, or an attorney, or a bank, or one of the various organizations that are willing to serve as trustee for pet trusts—and also identify backups. You can also appoint co-trustees. A caretaker should be appointed co-trustee only if there is at least one independent trustee. Whoever you choose as trustees, talk to them now to ensure they agree to serve.

Choosing a caregiver. As with trustees, contact potential caregivers now about your plans. For a professional breeder, the caretaker almost certainly must be a “dog person,” willing to take your dogs into their home or kennel and continue your breeding and showing program. If your loved ones cannot do this, consider reputable fellow breeders. If a caretaker is not available for dogs that will not be shown, consider naming a reputable animal sanctuary or rescue agency to select appropriate adoptive homes.

How long can a trust last? A trust that provides for breeding of offspring of your dogs and perpetuating the kennel name ad infinitum, to be financially supported by the trust, would probably be disfavored by the courts (though preferred by many breeders). State laws differ as to whether your trust can benefit only those of your dogs that are alive when your trust takes effect, or only those you own when the trust is created, or whether the trust can endure for 21 years after your death (regardless of how many dogs are alive at that time). Consult an attorney in your state to ensure that your trust meets your state’s criteria.

Co-ownership and estate planning. If you co-own dogs, talk with the co-owners about your estate plans. Consider establishing a trust that you and the co-owner(s) fund to benefit your co-owned dogs. This helps protect your assets: Not only may you be able to share legal fees, but if you establish a trust without regard for a co-owner’s rights, that co-owner may challenge the trust in court. Even if your trust prevails, legal fees from such a fight may deplete the trust.

When your dogs die. Your trust should include instructions for disbursing any assets that remain when your dogs die or the trust ends. Do not leave these assets to the caretaker: That gives a disincentive to provide a long and lavish life for your dogs. Rather, ensure your caretaker receives adequate money only while the dogs are alive and well cared for. When the dogs die or the trust ends, leave the residual money to a loved one or charity.

Drafting your trust. This column is only an overview and does not constitute legal advice. Yet I hope it provides some insights into the kinds of issues to consider when planning for your dogs’ future. You should consult an attorney in your state who is knowledgeable about estate planning to establish your dogs’ trust. ♦

Beauty comes from a life well lived.

A Dog's Purpose in Life (from a 6-year-old).

Being a veterinarian, I had been called to examine a ten-year-old Irish Wolfhound named Belker. The dog's owners, Ron, his wife, Lisa, and their little boy, Shane, were all very attached to Belker, and they were hoping for a miracle.

I examined Belker and found he was dying of cancer. I told the family we couldn't do anything for Belker, and offered to perform the euthanasia procedure for the old dog in their home.

As we made arrangements, Ron and Lisa told me they thought it would be good for six-year-old Shane to observe the procedure. They felt as though Shane might learn something from the experience.

The next day, I felt the familiar catch in my throat as Belker's family surrounded him. Shane seemed so calm, petting the old dog for the last time, that I wondered if he understood what was going on.

Austin Slabaugh and his BENCI

Within a few minutes, Belker slipped peacefully away.

The little boy seemed to accept Belker's transition without any difficulty or confusion. We sat together for a while after Belker's death, wondering aloud about the sad fact that animal lives are shorter than human lives. Shane, who had been listening quietly, piped up, "I know why."

Startled, we all turned to him. What came out of his mouth next stunned me. I'd never heard a more comforting explanation.

He said, "People are born so that they can learn how to live a good life -- like loving everybody all the time and being nice, right?" The six-year-old continued, "Well, dogs already know how to do that, so they don't have to stay as long."

Live simply.
Love generously.
Care deeply.
Speak kindly.

Remember, if a dog was the teacher you would learn things like:

When loved ones come home, always run to greet them.

Never pass up the opportunity to go for a joyride.

Allow the experience of fresh air and the wind in your face to be pure ecstasy.

Take naps.

Stretch before rising.

Run, romp, and play daily.

Thrive on attention and let people touch you.

Avoid biting when a simple growl will do.

On warm days, stop to lie on your back on the grass.

On hot days, drink lots of water and lie under a shady tree.

When you're happy, dance around and wag your entire body.

Delight in the simple joy of a long walk.

Be loyal.

Never pretend to be something you're not.

If what you want lies buried, dig until you find it.

When someone is having a bad day, be silent, sit close by and nuzzle them gently.

ENJOY EVERY MOMENT OF EVERY DAY!

Summer Fun in British Columbia!

Kristy Emery from BC invited me and my girls to the Beautiful Island of Vancouver for the Island Circuit. I was impressed with the gorgeous venues and the wonderful hospitality of our Canadian neighbors, and highly recommend entering these shows. There were a couple of us PSVC members that entered dogs throughout the entire circuit that culminated with the Canadian Vizsla Nationals, and much fun was had, from negotiating how dog shows are done up North, cheering each other on, and enjoying good food, drinks, and laughs! Our goal was to hopefully earn a few points for Lela and Turq's Canadian conformation titles, and they both had some nice class wins, as points kept getting passed around to the U.S. contingent! We had our best day with Lela going WB/BOW and BOS at the Canadian Nationals! Yep, we dusted the old girl off for this prestigious win, and now she is one point shy of her Canadian title. I guess that means another trip north!
