President's Message

Welcome to summer! It is nice to get into better weather and spend quality time with our red dogs outdoors. This year is nearly half over and our club activities are beginning to pick up.

We had a successful hunt test this year which concluded the weekend of June 9th and 10th at the Canine Country Club in Fall City. We had 33 dogs competing both days and great participation from club members with their vizslas.

Our summer specialty is coming soon, August 17th at the King County fairgrounds in Enumclaw. Our fall specialty will be at the Monroe fairgrounds November 17th.

It is important to note that these club sponsored events take a lot of planning and coordination to pull off. We cannot do them without the support and volunteer efforts of our club members. As we get closer to the actual events, requests for help will be made and I would hope that many of you will be willing to donate your time and skills to help us out. We have been successful in the past and I am certain that we will be going forward.

Enjoy the weather with your dogs and I look forward to seeing you at our upcoming events.

Tom Shay

Buddy System: How to Teach Your Dog to Swim

One of the best things about summer is cooling off in your local swimming hole, especially if you can have a swimming buddy! If you live near a dog friendly lake or beach, or you have a backyard pool, you should definitely encourage your dog to join you for a swim. But you may want to teach her a few basic lessons first, especially if she has never been swimming before.

Safety First

Just because you have a dog doesn't mean she'll be a natural swimmer. In fact, some breeds—the bulldog, for example—cannot swim at all and will sink right to the bottom if tossed in the water without a flotation device holding them above water.

Dogs that are lightweight, have short legs, or will be spending time out on the boat in deep waters with you should be outfitted with their own life vest or jacket. Too much noise and activity can be distracting. Begin with a quiet area of the lake, river or pool, and keep your dog leashed at all times in case she gets into trouble—and to keep her from swimming too far out. The leash should not come off until she is able to swim unassisted and is consistently returning to you when called back.

Never (ever!) leave a dog unattended in the water, not even for a minute. And for goodness sake, don't throw your dog into the water for her first swim. It'll only frighten her to the point that she'll never want to swim again.

Start Slow

When teaching your dog to swim, it's best to start in a shallow area where you can walk beside your pet. Put on the flotation vest if needed, attach the leash, and walk slowly into the water, letting her get used to having wet feet.

If your pet is reluctant, bring a toy or a few training treats to coax her in farther. Use a positive tone of voice and lots of verbal praise when she enters the water. Gradually take her into deeper water until she must start paddling to stay afloat. At this point, you can use an arm to provide support under your dog's belly if she appears to need the extra support. This gives her the incentive to paddle her rear legs along with the front legs.

You don't want your dog to use only her front legs to swim, as she will tire more quickly and splash around. Keep supporting her until she seems comfortable in the water and is using all four limbs to swim. If at any point she appears to be panicking, back up into the shallow water and let her calm down before trying again.

Post-Swim Ritual

When the lesson is over, it's time to get your dog out of the pool or boat. Take your time showing her the proper and safe way to exit the boat or pool so she can find her own way out the next time. A good final rinse with fresh water will help get rid of any residual chemicals or algae that might be clinging to her haircoat. Finally, give her lots of verbal and physical praise after the lesson, and maybe an extra treat. This will help your dog to associate fun and positive times with the experience of swimming.

Hunt Test 2018 Report

This year's hunt test was held at K9 Country Club in Fall City. A great location that is close for many and helps us draw a good crowd. As is typical the grass there is either too long or too short. This year a bit short. But we made it work just fine. Weather managed to hold for us, giving us lovely cool conditions for the 2 day hunt test with almost no rain.

Judges were great- including our own Bruce Dickey who also lent a lot of support- especially to our new HT Secretary on her first gig- Barb Rowdon.

We had 33 dogs running each day with a very strong showing of our favorite red dogs! About 10 Vizslas per day! That is great and always a benefit to the club when our own team shows up to support!

This year the Hunt Test section of the club invested heavily in equipment that allows the club to operate totally independent of other clubs and borrowed equipment. We purchased 13 bird crates, 2 70gallon water tubs, 7 bird bags, and a hunt test trailer that will allow for storage of all our club gear (HT and Specialty).

We had a great group of volunteers who did a lot of heavy lifting and deserve much thanks. Thanks to Barb Rowdon, Kris Colt, Jayme Nelson, Tom Shay, Eddie Rossnagle, Katrina Sullivan, Mike Wald, Bruce Strong, Gail Flemming, Janine Marty, Amy Moosman, Kristy Emery. Apologies to any I may have missed.

We look forward to having more people from the club get involved in this event. You don't have to be a hunter to appreciate these dogs doing what they were bred to do! It's really a fun day and the work not too bad. We had a great time playing with at least two litters of Vizsla pups, getting our dogs together for play dates, and just generally hanging around some good people that we don't see enough of...

10 Tips To Protect Your Dog's Paws From Hot Pavement

Posted by Lady Bug| May 3, 2017

Many owners like taking their dogs on walks to enjoy the warm summer weather, but they may forget one important detail: hot pavement will burn a dog's paws. It can be tempting to take your dog everywhere you go, but it can cause serious harm to your dog if you are not careful. Remember that if asphalt and cement can get hot enough to cook an egg during the summer, or if it feels way too hot for you to leave your hands comfortably on the ground for at least 10 seconds, it can result in nasty burns on your dog's paw pads. This is especially true if you have a new puppy with tender young paws.

So what can be done to protect your dog's paws? Here are 10 tips to keep your dog or puppy from getting burned this summer.

Protect Your Dog's Paws

1. Walk Your Dog When It's Cool

This is an obvious tip, but one that folks sometimes don't consider enough. Spring, summer, and even fall are great seasons to take your dog out on sunny walks, but be mindful of the temperature and when and where you walk him. The best time to walk your dog is in the morning or late evening, when the pavement is cool. Avoid walking your dog in the afternoon or early evening when it's hot outside, because the pavement will be its hottest.

2. Toughen Your Dog's Paws

During cool times of the day, you should walk your dog on pavement, because the hard and rough surfaces will toughen the pads on your dog's paws. This will help to make her pads tougher, providing a natural resistance to damage from hot surfaces.

3. Stay On The Grass When It's Hot

If you end up taking your dog out during the warmer times of the day, be sure to stay on the grass and stick to shady areas. Stay away from sidewalks or any paved areas to avoid burning. A shady park can be a great place to take your dog on a warm afternoon.

4. Moisturize Your Dog's Paws

You want your dog to have tough paws, but you don't want them to get too dry or they will be more susceptible to cracking, peeling, and cuts. These dry signs in your dog's paws can also make them more susceptible to burns from hot pavement. Consider moisturizing your dog's pads daily, especially in hot weather, to help prevent injuries and burns. Paw Nectar is a highly-rated, 100 percent natural, treatment for dry, cracked paws. Use it regularly. It will not hurt your pup if he licks it. Paw Nectar can also be used on a dog's dry or cracking nose.

5. Use Paw Wax

Paw wax can easily be spread on your dog's paw pads prior to walking to protect them from rough or hot surfaces. Paw wax is designed to protect your dog's feet from several potentially harmful surfaces and chemicals, like road salts. A favorite is Musher's Secret Paw Wax, which dog owners apply for many surface solutions - ice, snow, heat, sand, rocks, gravel... There is a You Tube video endorsement for Musher's Secret at the end of this article....

Continued...10 Tips To Protect Your Dog's Paws From Hot Pavement

6. Try Dog Shoes

Dog shoes are a good way protect your dog's paws from all kinds of harmful surfaces and potential injuries if your dog will wear them. Also, they must fit her properly or they might pose a danger. Be aware that not all dogs can get used to dog shoes, and some might have a hard time walking in them.

Make sure you get the right size and purchase shoes with rubber or neoprene soles, as they are most protective against damaging surfaces. There will definitely be an adjustment period for your dog trying to walk with dog shoes on, but if you can get your dog used to using them, they could be a solution for hot and cold weather hazards. You might want to read this article on how to encourage your dog to wear shoes.

A big favorite among dog owners is the Bark Brite set of All-Weather Neoprene Paw Protector Dog Boots. There are instructions for measuring your dogs' feet at this link. They have reflector straps, which is a bonus feature. Boots or any other paw or foot covering should be kept on as short a period of time as possible. Dogs "perspire" through their mouths and their paws. When dogs' paws are free, their perspiration allows their body heat to adjust.

7. Consider All-Terrain Boots

All-terrain boots are similar to other dog boots, but they are more rugged and, generally, more expensive. But if you have an active, athletic dog and she hikes, runs, loves the snow, sand, water, and well... hot pavement... the cost of the boots are well worth it. Canine Equipment's Ultimate Trail Dog Boots are made of recycled rubber and have snug wrap-around closures. They are available in five sizes (see link for measuring instructions), but the front pair and back pair are differently sized so they match the true proportional size of your dog's feet!

Remember, take them off whenever you can, so your dog can adjust her body temperature by having her feet exposed to the air. And don't keep foot coverings on inside the house if you can help it.

8. Grab Some Socks For Your Dog's Paws

Dog socks are intended for indoors and are a last resort solution if you need to take your dog onto the hot pavement. Make sure the socks have rubber or neoprene soles or your dog will burn his feet. Sock soles are much thinner than shoe soles, so make your sock-walks very short.

RC Sport Pawks Dog Socks have full-foot grips on the bottoms and come in several sizes and colors:

Don't use disposable shoes. They are made of rubber or silicone and fit tightly so there is no room for your dog's feet to breathe. Additionally, they do not provide any barrier to heat or cold. The temperature beneath them goes right through to your dog's feet. And don't use any product that sticks to your dog's foot. You don't want anything to rip the skin on your her foot pads.

9. Get Dog Shoe Suspenders

I didn't believe them either, but there is a solution designed for dogs who won't wear their shoes and socks. It's called Canine Footwear Suspenders Snuggly Boots. Actually they are adjustable suspenders and they don't come with snuggly boots, or any boots, but if your dog really needs to wear boots to protect him from the hot pavement or any other surface, these suspenders may be worth a try.

10. Check And Clean Your Dog's Paws Frequently

Be sure to check your dog's paw pads daily for any signs of damage and check between his paw pads for any stones or other debris; pull them out gently. You can wipe his paws off with a room temperature damp cloth before moisturizing the pads of his feet with Paw Nectar. If you do happen to see a problem, or if your dog is acting strangely on his feet, be sure to take him to the vet.

Here's a very eye-opening chart from the Humane Society of just what your dog is experiencing when he's standing or walking on asphalt or pavement in hot weather....

These 10 tips will help your dog stay safe and uninjured this summer from the dangers of hot pavement. Be sure to keep a close eye on your dog to protect her from any other heat related injuries as well. Make sure you watch for Symptoms of Heat Stroke In Dogs. Also, consider these 12 Quick Tips For Keeping Your Dog Cool In Summer.

As mentioned earlier, here's a product review video for Musher's Secret if you're interested. You can buy the paw protection wax here and I can't recommend it highly enough.

With my tips on keeping your doggie's paws protected and on getting a great life vest for your dog if you are heading for the water should keep your buddy safer and more comfortable this summer. Happy Summer!
